

Approach in poverty alleviation

What is the issue?

 $n\n$

\n

• India's record of reducing poverty is not very encouraging in comparison to many developing countries.

\n

 \bullet This calls for a reassessment of the approach to poverty reduction efforts. $\ensuremath{\backslash} n$

How has India's record been?

 $n\n$

\n

- India extricated 120 million people from extreme poverty between 1990 and 2013; however the process was relatively slow. $$
- Over the same period, China reduced the number of people living in extreme poverty from 756 million to 25 million.
- Growth elasticity of poverty reduction i.e. the impact of economic growth on poverty reduction is also very weak in comparison to many high growth countries.

\n

• Despite many initiatives in this regard, the results are being diluted by the conditions of rising inequalities.

What should be done?

 $n\n$

\n

 \bullet An essential element in any poverty alleviation strategy is the prevention of large declines in household incomes. \n

- State-sponsored anti-poverty and social protection schemes should come with the right understanding.
- \bullet Conditional Cash Transfers (CCTs) have been proposed as an effective instrument in alleviating poverty in many countries. $\mbox{\sc h}$
- \bullet Above addressing poverty, CCTs have longer term results through behavioural changes in households. $\mbox{\ensuremath{\backslash}} n$
- \bullet Importantly, encouraging investment in the human capital of poor children can only break the inter-generational transmission of poverty. \n
- This translates to quality and equal educational opportunities, accessible and affordable health infrastructure
- \bullet The idea of Universal Basic Income in the latest Economic Survey is positive, but focusses more on reducing poverty. $\ensuremath{\backslash n}$
- However, there is a need to build the social infrastructure capable of providing quality education, health, and nutrition to reap full benefits.
- \bullet A well-functioning social infrastructure is thus a prerequisite for CCTs and other such measures in reducing poverty. $\mbox{\sc h}$
