

Assam-Meghalaya Border Dispute

Why in news?

Tension gripped the Assam-Meghalaya border areas after six people were killed when police intercepted a truck that was allegedly smuggling timber.

What is the incident about?

- The Firing - There was an alleged clash between the Assam Police and a mob in an area bordering the West Karbi Anglong district of Assam and Mukroh village in Meghalaya's West Jaintia Hills.
- Six people were killed out of which five are from Meghalaya.
- Assam's point - The Assam Police has claimed that they opened fire in self defence after a mob surrounded them when they were trying to intercept a truck allegedly smuggling timber.
- Assam has announced a one-man inquiry commission under a retired High Court judge to probe the issue.
- Meghalaya's stand - Meghalaya Chief Minister termed the Assam Police's actions "inhuman" and said the state will set up a judicial commission and a Special Investigation Team until a central agency takes over.

What is the border dispute between the two states?

During the British rule, undivided Assam included present-day Nagaland, Arunachal Pradesh, Meghalaya and Mizoram.

- Assam and Meghalaya share an 885-km border.
- In 1970, Meghalaya was carved out of Assam as an autonomous state.
- In 1972, Meghalaya became a full-fledged state following the Assam Reorganisation (Meghalaya) Act of 1969.
- The Meghalaya government found the Act unacceptable.
- As many as 12 land dispute points have been a bone of contention, out of which 6 areas have found some type of resolution after signing a memorandum of understanding (MoU) between the two states.
- Langpih in the West Garo Hills bordering the Kamrup district of Assam is a major flashpoint.
- Langpih was part of the Kamrup district during the British colonial period, but post-Independence, it became part of the Garo Hills and Meghalaya.
- Meghalaya claims that the border problem in Langpih has been created by Assam, which has often set up police posts there.
