

Challenges to the Quadrilateral Alliance

What is the issue?

\n\n

While an anti-Chinese alliance is taking shape in the Indo-Pacific, it is not easy to sustain it in the prevailing circumstances.

\n\n

What is the international context?

\n\n

\n

- U.S. President Trump believes in a world governed by self-interest, with little room for shared responsibility.

\n

- In contrast, Chinese President Xi is taking the high road, is projecting himself as a firm believer in globalisation and free trade.

\n

- Notably, the former confronts major opposition to his policies within the U.S, while the latter's grip on China is almost total.

\n

- Against this backdrop, a coalition of all those willing to align with the U.S. against China's expanding ambitions is shaping up.

\n

\n\n

What are the recent developments?

\n\n

\n

- Official level talks were held recently, between the U.S., Japan, Australia & India for establishing the "Quadrilateral Alliance".

\n

- This marks a major shift in India's foreign policy, as it is an active alignment to an emergent power block.

\n

- As China's expansionist attitudes intensify, more countries are expected to align with the Quadrilateral group.

- \n
- Notably, this is the first time that India has indicated a resolve to align openly with the U.S. to tackle issues specific to Indo-Pacific.
- \n
- This enhances the Indo-US cooperation as major defence partners.
- \n

\n\n

What is China's Position?

\n\n

- \n
- Political - China too seems eager to fight the challenges of a counter-alliance.
- \n

\n\n

- \n
- The Communist Party Congress emphasised on a strong military, signalling little willingness for compromise.
- \n
- It also reinforced Mr. Xi's paramount leadership and clearly elaborated on China's ambitions for global leadership.
- \n
- Notably, Mr. Xi adopted a hard line on many contentious issues in the region and beyond, reiterating an aggressive foreign policy.
- \n
- Economic Might - China is positioned most advantageously as far as economic aspects are concerned.
- \n
- It is the most important trading partner for over 90 countries and a massive economic power house.
- \n
- Although the economic benefits of its Belt & Road Initiative (BRI) are disputed, it has definitely got a favoured reception by most countries.
- \n

\n\n

What are the challenges for the alliance?

\n\n

- \n
- Most Asian nations don't actually have an unfavourable opinion on China despite its reckless foreign policy.

\n

- China has embarked on a charm offensive to win the support of Asian nations through lavish aid offers.

\n

- Even Mr.Trump, seemed to have softened his criticism of China, after China produced some attractive mega deals.

\n

- Only India, Japan & Vietnam have shown some willing to build an opposition to China's designs.

\n

- Also, nations in the quadrilateral alliance haven't stated a clear vision and gave separate press releases that were vastly divergent.

\n

- The opinions varied form 'joint security patrol' to 'funding mechanism to counter BRI'.

\n

\n\n

How does the future look?

\n\n

\n

- The Quadrilateral idea is likely to further irk China.

\n

- As developments become clearer with the formal setting up of the Quadrilateral, China is certain to counter it proactively.

\n

- This will pave the way for a new round of turmoil and China would use both force and inducements to win more countries to its side.

\n

- The consequences of this could be quite significant for peace and stability in the Asian region.
