Why in news?

As per the recent National Crime Records Bureau (NCRB) report on the crime situation in India, there was an increase in various types of crimes in 2022 compared to 2021.

Suicides

- Family problems, marriage related problems and illness.
- Overall male tend to be suicide victims than female.

What are the limitations of the report?

- Data collection- The report only shows registered crime, not actual crime. For example, more reports of crimes against women may mean more awareness, not more violence.
- Principle Offence Rule- The report follows a rule that counts only the most severe crime in a single FIR.
- This can lead to undercounting of some crimes, such as rape, if they are accompanied by murder.
- Data inaccuracy- The data is collected from local police, which may not reflect the true causes or extent of crimes.
- Lack of wider focus- The NCRB itself notes that the socio-economic causative factors or reasons of crimes are not being captured by the Bureau.
- Lack of trust- Some groups may not report crimes due to fear or lack of trust in the police.
- Manpower shortage- Some of the police stations may have staff shortages or vacancies that affect data quality.

What lies ahead?

- The surge in cybercrimes indicates that the online world is not safe, it requires safe and secure architecture and proper awareness among the people.
- There is a need to
  - Strengthen support services for victims, providing safe shelter homes, and making legal aid more accessible.
  - Optimise the full potential of technology to create safer environments, such as panic buttons in public spaces and enhanced surveillance systems.
- A holistic approach must be adopted with better community involvement, education, support services, and capacity building to tackle the surge in crimes in India.
