

Dealing with Paid News

What is the issue?

\n\n

The Election Commission of India (ECI) holds that paid news impairs the process of free and fair elections.

\n\n

What is the observation?

\n\n

\n

- Paid news refers to the news or analysis appearing in any media for a price in cash or kind.

\n

- It plays a significant but negative role in the context of free and fair elections.

\n

- It also involves under-reporting of election expenses by candidates.

\n

- EC found 42 cases of paid news in the election of BJP's Narottam Mishra in 2008 Madhya Pradesh Assembly elections.

\n

\n\n

How is paid news being dealt?

\n\n

\n

- There is no specific law against "paid news" in India.

\n

- But the poll panel depend on Section 10A of the Representation of Peoples Act (RPA).

\n

- It deals with the misreporting of funds related to election expenses.

\n

- E.g. In 2017, the ECI ordered Mishra's disqualification and barred him from contesting elections for 3 years.

- \n
- It argued that Mishra knew of, and by implication authorised the publication of the “reports”.
- \n
- This should be seen as political advertising under Section 77 of the RPA.
- \n
- So, the expenditure incurred or authorised on this head should have been listed in the submissions to the poll regulator.
- \n
- But Mishra had “failed to lodge a correct and true account of his election expenses”.
- \n

\n\n

What is the court's view?

\n\n

- \n
- The Delhi High Court later set aside Mishra's disqualification.
- \n
- It said that the content of a media article or a news feature on particular candidates should not be regulated indirectly through EC's directives.
- \n
- It observed that they essentially fall within the domain of free speech.
- \n
- So, this eventually restricts the poll regulator from acting against paid news.
- \n

\n\n

What are the demands in place?

\n\n

- \n
- The ECI suggested the Union government that paid news be made an electoral offence under the RPA.
- \n
- A Law Commission report from 2015 also recommends amending the RPA to this effect.
- \n
- But governments have approached the problem from a press regulation perspective rather than poll regulation.
- \n
- E.g. the earlier government brought the Registration of Newspapers and Publications Bill, 2013

\n

- The present government proposed providing for suspension of publication permits for a period of 45 days for erring publications.

\n

\n\n

What could be done?

\n\n

\n

- Cracking down on candidates who mislead the electorate through paid news preserves India's democratic values.

\n

- The ECI has approached the Supreme Court against the Delhi HC order, and so, much depends on which way the SC decides.

\n

- Meanwhile, the government and political parties would do well to gather the will to amend the RPA.

\n

\n\n

\n\n

Source: Financial Express

\nAuthor: Shankar IAS Academy Bangalore - Best UPSC Coaching Institute

\n

