

India's Multi-Directional Foreign Policy

What is the issue?

\n\n

A range of events and diplomatic developments in the recent days suggest the emergence of a multipolar world and India's multi-directional foreign policy.

\n\n

What suggest this trend?

\n\n

\n

- South Asia - India recently hosted "Bodhi Parva, the BIMSTEC Festival of Buddhist Heritage.

\n

- It was part of the 20th anniversary of the Bay of Bengal Forum, the BIMSTEC.

\n

- It brings together five South Asian nations (Bangladesh, Bhutan, India, Nepal and Sri Lanka) and two South East Asian nations (Burma and Thailand).

\n

- It gains significance in the context of India's ties with its neighbouring countries in the South Asian region.

\n

- Further, India's eastward orientation is highlighted by the recent conference on connecting India and the 10-member ASEAN grouping.

\n

- Russia - India and Russia held their first bilateral tri-service exercise earlier in the year.

\n

- This is the first such exercise for India with any of its foreign partners; certainly reflecting a maturity in the strategic partnership.

\n

- The 'Indra' exercise is seen as India's way of balancing strategic relations with Russia and the US and sending a message to China.

\n

- Asia-Pacific - India hosted the Russia-India-China (RIC) trilateral meeting recently.

\n

- Trilateral consultations will contribute to strengthening practical coordination on regional and global issues.

\n

- The meet also comes as an opportunity for discussions on deepening coordination in the Asia-Pacific region.

\n

- Indo-Pacific - India's recent engagement in the Indo-Pacific quadrilateral security dialogue is an example of rising minilateralism.

\n

- Minilateralism refers to the diplomacy among a limited number of members, dealing with defined subject matters.

\n

- The grouping highlights India's strategy of such flexible arrangements to pursue its interests in a more complex world.

\n

- Further, India and Australia are expected to hold their maiden 'two-plus-two' dialogue involving the Foreign and Defence Secretaries to expand their strategic partnership in the Indo-Pacific region.

\n

- Indian Ocean Region - India, Japan and Australia held their foreign secretary-level trilateral meet recently.

\n

- With the increasing Chinese presence in the IOR, it is important to re-assert the freedom of navigation in open seas.

\n

- The trilateral meet could help boost India's influence in the IOR.

\n

- This supplements the quadrilateral dialogue as well as the on-going trilateral engagement with the US and Japan.

\n

- Commonwealth - The recent visit by Prince Charles marked a key development in India's ties with the Commonwealth.

\n

- One idea being considered was that the administration of the grouping should be de-centralised.

\n

- As the world's largest democracy, India's role in decentralised administration and contribution to the Commonwealth could be crucial.

\n

\n\n

What do these signify?

\n\n

\n

- India's diplomatic developments, significantly highlights its adaptive policies amidst the newly emerging geopolitical world.

\n

- It asserts India's place in the structure of global power and influence the balance of power in the Indo-Pacific and Eurasia.

\n

- They also point to the breakdown of the post Cold War world order dominated by the United States.
