- Defence-Israel has been a major supplier of defence equipment, as well as of high-tech communications systems that have helped meet some of India's security tech challenges.
- Innovation partnership- Israel is an important partner to India in the innovation ecosystem — smart irrigation systems being an example of cooperation in this field.

What are the potential for India in Middle East?

- Strategic partnerships- India has strengthened bilateral ties with countries in the region, including Saudi Arabia, Israel, and Turkey. Long-standing connections to Iran further enhance India's position.
- India-Middle East-Europe Economic Corridor- The ambitious project aims to foster connectivity and economic integration between Asia, the Persian Gulf, and Europe.
- Look West policy- India intensified its existing "Look West" policy focusing on the Arab Gulf countries, Israel and Iran, the goal was to strengthen economic ties, enhance strategic partnerships and foster regional stability.
- Regional stability- The US-Saudi mega deal would normalize relations between Saudi and Israel which could lead to a more stable Middle East, beneficial for India's regional interests and its diaspora in the Gulf countries.

US-Saudi mega deal involves US, Saudi Arabia and Israel to support Israel against Hamas and Iran, which could lead to significant shift in Middle East relations.

What are the challenges faced by India in Middle East?

- Stalled project- The ongoing Israel Hamas war has caused a stall in the plans for this ambitious connectivity project, which aims to link India with Europe via the Gulf.
- Balancing relations-India strives to maintain a delicate balance between supporting Israel and fostering strong ties with Arab nations but this has become more complex with the intensification of conflicts in the region.
- Israel Hamas conflict- The recent terrorist attacks by Hamas and the retaliatory military response from Israel have posed difficult challenges for India's diplomatic strategy, especially considering India's significant diaspora and trade relations in the region.

- Lack of security presence- India's lack of security presence in Middle East has led to costly evacuations of its diaspora during crises, such as the evacuation from Kuwait during the Gulf War.
- Geopolitics of corridor- IMEC involves US allies like the UAE and Saudi Arabia, which are economic powerhouses, whereas International North-South Transport Corridor (INSTC) involves Iran and Russia, which have been at odds with the US.

INSTC is an initiative taken by India, Russia, and Iran, aiming to enhance trade and transport connectivity among countries along its route

What lies ahead?

- India's strategic choices must navigate geopolitical complexities and safeguard investments
- India will welcome a durable peace in the Middle East, with a stronger American presence in the region it considers its extended neighbourhood.
- The US-Saudi mega deal will provide India with an opportunity to better harness the region's potential and foster a conducive environment for its strategic and economic goals.
