

Indo-Japan Strategic Partnership

What is the issue?

\n\n

\n

- India & Japan currently have a “Special Strategic and Global Partnership”.

\n

- New Delhi accords this status to no other partner.

\n

- However, it largely falls short of a full fledged alliance.

\n

\n\n

Why did India confer such a status?

\n\n

\n

- Geopolitics - The rise of China and doubts about USA’s commitments in Asia has pushed both the countries towards this relationship.

\n

- Economic Aspect - Japan is investing heavily in Indian projects.

\n

- The two countries are also working on a joint infrastructure development and connectivity drive traversing the Indian Ocean.

\n

- Their projects span from Myanmar to Sri Lanka to Iran and encompass the Asia-Africa Growth Corridor.

\n

- Defence - Indo-Japan joint naval exercises are being regularly organised together with the U.S. Navy.

\n

- Major arms deals like the ShinMaywa US-2i amphibious aircraft are on the cards.

\n

- Japanese investments in the strategically places like the Andaman & Nicobar Islands is also likely to help India enhance its security sentinals.

\n

\n\n

How is this different from an alliance?

\n\n

\n

- Alliances have lacked their relevance in the post-cold war era and strategic partnerships have increasingly become the norm.

\n

- Lacking commitment - Unlike alliances, strategic partnerships don't demand commitments to a partner's disputes with other countries.

\n

- New Delhi does not take a strong position on Japan's territorial disputes with China and Russia.

\n

- Likewise, Tokyo does not openly side with India in its quarrels with China and Pakistan.

\n

- Strategic partnership involves countries retaining their unconstrained diplomatic flexibility while continuing political engagement & economic cooperation.

\n

- Collaborative Approach - It also involves regular high-level interactions over a range of activities whereas an alliance is usually more pronounced in for defense & economy.

\n

- India and Japan are not only moving forward on economic and defence cooperation but are also cooperating on issues such as civil nuclear energy and UN reform.

\n

- It is also essential in the present times where states find themselves interdependent, even if their relationship is characterised by strategic tension.

\n

- e.g. India might confront China at Doklam but it also wants Chinese investment.
