What has Russia's geopolitical outlook been realigning?

\n\n

∖n

- Anti U.S. attitude Moscow's policies are driven largely by relentless hostility towards the US and containing the western alliance led by US.  $\n$
- This has literally driven Moscow into the arms of Beijing, and has resulting in a virtual Moscow-Beijing alliance to counter American hegemony.  $\n$
- While this trend would clearly pit Russia into an orbit that is hostile to India, there have nevertheless been efforts by Delhi to strengthen ties with Moscow.

∖n

- Internationally, India and Russia work together in forums like BRICS, the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO).  $\n$
- Also, Russia-India-China (RIC) trilateral is another forum of cooperation that was initially promoted by Russia.  $\n$
- Taliban Factor Russian has joined with China and Pakistan calling for negotiations with Afghan Taliban, which will give legitimacy to the Taliban.  $\n$
- This is ironic, given that approximately 14,000 Soviet soldiers were killed in action between 1979 and 1989 against the ISI-backed radical Afghan groups.  $\n$

 $\bullet$  While this will cement Russia into what is an anti-India pole, it will also weaken India's international rhetoric against terrorism.  $\n$

- This presents a serious challenge to India as increasing Chinese assertiveness in the Indian Ocean region has been ambitious and univocal.  $\n$

\n\n

∖n

- While the US and Japan acknowledge the vitality of India for the geo-political stability of Asia, Russia hasn't showed the same warmth.  $\n$
- This could possibly be due to Moscow apprehensions about India's membership in alliances like Quad (US, Australia, Japan, India).  $\n$

\n\n

∖n

• Historic Factors - China's superior economic prowess gives it an advantage in negotiating with Russia, but there are historical distates between the two.

\n

- Russia has a long border with China, and the latter's meteoric rise is perceived as a threat to Russia's Siberian region and Vladivostok.  $\n$
- The former Soviet Union (Now Russia) had a rickety relationship with China and there were even significant border skirmishes in 1968-70s.  $\n$

- Nonetheless, Moscow will continue to play second fiddle to China whenever it suits its interests and India needs to show dexterity to handle situations.  $\n$
