What are the challenges in reservation of assembly seats?

- Non-inclusive- The Bill provides for nomination rather than elected representatives which may fail to foster reconciliation.
- Favouritism-Lieutenant Governor is given too much power to nominate Kashmiri Pandits. This could lead to corruption and favouritism that overshadow the community's true aspirations and needs.
- Issues with nomination- The Bill differs from the past practice of nominating members by elected governments, which weakens the credibility and effectiveness of the nominated members, raising questions about their validity and acceptance by the people.
- Vote bank politics- The community can be used as a political card, without addressing their real needs or interests.
- Definition of Kashmiri Pandits- It is flexible and could exclude certain categories from the nomination.

What lies ahead?

- The journey toward genuine empowerment necessitates embracing democratic norms, fostering meaningful engagement, and creating pathways that bridge communities rather than perpetuating divisions.
- The need of the hour is inclusive measures through which political representation can truly catalyse reconciliation.
