

Jobless Growth

What is the issue?

Chief Economic Adviser Arvind Subramaniam recently pointed to the need to achieve higher economic growth, in the range of 8% to 10%, to solve the problem of jobless growth.

What did the NITI Aayog says?

 $n\n$

\n

- It is worth noting that India added just 1.35 lakh jobs in eight labour-intensive sectors in 2015, compared to the 9.3 lakh jobs that were created in 2011, according to Labour Bureau figures.
- $\bullet$  The rate of unemployment grew steadily from 3.8% in 2011-12 to 5% in 2015-16.

\n

- NITI Aayog has dismissed concerns over jobless growth, saying the real problem is underemployment rather than unemployment.
- Nevertheless, this month the government set up a high-level task force headed by NITI Aayog Vice-Chairman Arvind Panagariya to obtain reliable data on employment trends to aid policymaking.

What is the relation between job and economic growth?

 $n\n$

\n

- The focus on jobs is obviously vital. However, higher economic growth alone will not solve the jobs problem.
- Jobs can be created when growth comes from the transition of labour from informal sectors like agriculture to the more formal manufacturing and service sectors.

۱n

- Such extensive growth runs the risk of stagnation once the available stock of informal labour is exhausted as some Southeast Asian countries found out the hard way in the late 1990s.
- $\bullet$  On the other hand, growth can come about without any substantial jobcreation in the formal sectors of the economy, but through improvements in productivity. \n

What India should do?

 $n\n$

\n

- India should aim at growth that is driven both by improvements in productivity and modernisation of its labour force especially since better jobs are crucial to improving the lives of millions who are employed, indeed underemployed, in low-paying jobs in the farm sector.
- Ironically, achieving both those objectives will first require labour reforms ones that can both boost labour mobility within the formal sector and bring down the barriers businesses face in hiring labour.

   \n
- $\bullet$  Job-creation needs to be an essential axis along which economic and social policies are formulated.  $\mbox{\sc h}$
