

Multi-Pronged Diplomacy in South Asia

What is the issue?

\n\n

\n

- An international agreement to curtail terror financing by Pakistan was recently reached at FATF - with strong Indian backing.

\n

- Almost simultaneously, the cross border TAPI pipeline project was celebrated in a joint ceremony - symbolising cooperative diplomacy.

\n

- This “Stick and Carrot Approach”, opens up interesting trends in the subcontinent, which simmers hope.

\n

\n\n

What were the new developments?

\n\n

\n

- Financial Action Task Force (FATF) recently threatened Pakistan with economic sanctions if it funds terror groups against Afghanistan and India.

\n

- This can be seen as a clear success for India’s coercive diplomacy against Pakistan in international forums.

\n

- At the same time, a ground-breaking ceremony for the construction of the trans-border natural gas pipeline in Afghanistan was also celebrated.

\n

- Turkmenistan-Afghanistan-Pakistan-India (TAPI) pipeline project is hoped to bring economic prosperity and enhance diplomatic cooperation in the region.

\n

- These events signify that countries seem to be pragmatic with their economic and political engagements, in the current era of globalisation.

\n

- Although there is no guarantee of success either in the coercive or the cooperative approach, both need to be pursued suitably.

\n

\n\n

How was the decision at FATF reached?

\n\n

- \n
  - Pakistan has traditionally been a difficult country for the international community to coercively force compliance on terror related matters.
  - \n
    - But the current Trump administration has been displaying extra zeal, although there was much scepticism on the possibilities.
    - \n
      - Recently, Trump announced a major cut in military assistance to Pakistan for its non-compliance on the terror front, but this only saw the spiking of attacks.
      - \n
        - Subsequently, he has now mobilised the international community at FATF to squeeze Pakistan's terror strategy by choking its finances.
        - \n
          - While China (as a close ally of Pakistan) could've blocked the action, it hadn't done so, which may be indicative of China's changing worldview.
          - \n
            - Although, Beijing's position could've merely been a temporary aberration, it indeed calls for cheer.

\n\n

How does the economic cooperation angle look?

\n\n

- \n
  - Facilitating regional economic cooperation would enhance mutual interdependence and ensure lasting peace in the region.
  - \n
    - Notably, India and Pakistan currently have very small and restricted trade due to problems over the Kashmir question.
    - \n
      - Despite these problems, all countries have been showing keen interest in the TAPI pipeline project, which is hoped to be highly beneficial.
      - \n
        - Surprisingly, even non-state actors like Taliban who continue to hold significant clout over regions in Afghanistan have welcomed the project.
        - \n
          - While project is expected to cost $10 billion, no international bank or government appears willing to risk investments in this troubled region.

\n

- Here too, China could prove crucial, as it is already betting massively in the region through its Belt and Road Initiative.

\n

- These new dynamics imply that the past might not constrain the future and that structural changes in international relations are inevitable over time.

\n

\n\n

Quick Fact

\n\n

FATF

\n\n

\n

- The Financial Action Task Force (FATF) is an inter-governmental body established in 1989 and is headquartered at Paris, France.

\n

- The objective of the FATF is to combat money laundering, terrorist financing and other related threats to the integrity of the international financial system.

\n

- It nudges nations to legislate on concerned subjects by setting standards for effective implementation of legal, regulatory and operational measures.

\n

- Currently, FATF consists of 35 member countries and 2 regional organisations, the European Commission (EU) and the Gulf Co-operation Council (GCC).

\n

- Notably, most major economies (including India) are members but Pakistan is not a member.

\n

- The FATF also works in close co-operation with a number of international and regional bodies like the - UN, World Bank and Interpol.
