

Panchayat staffing rules

Why in news?

\n\n

The Centre is expected to release a report, specifying the rules for recruitment of non-elected panchayat staff.

\n\n

What are the issues in this regard?

\n\n

\n

- Recruitment - The Rajasthan government recently mandated minimum educational qualifications for candidates contesting elections for panchayati raj institutions.

\n

- But no state has clear rules on how the non-elected staff at panchayats should be appointed.

\n

- The system of patronage and nepotism or preferential treatment in recruitment are plaguing the outcomes of rural development initiatives.

\n

- Training and Performance- The other problem is the large scale involvement of ill-organised cadres and temporary workers to manage programmes.

\n

- It becomes hard to either monitor their role or make them obey disciplinary steps and this have an impact on services delivery.

\n

- In the context of community workers engaged in rural development programmes, there is no connection between the their performance and the salaries they draw.

\n

- Notably, the variation in their performance is mostly due to lack of trained human resource.

\n

- States - Under the Fourteenth Finance Commission award, grants are being allocated to states to meet out Panchayati Raj Institutions' needs.

\n

- However, the states are reluctant to furnish audited reports, statements of account and utilisation certificates in respect of this financial assistance.

\n

\n\n

What does the report aim for?

\n\n

\n

- The report primarily aims at putting in a place a defined Panchayat staffing rules to improve service delivery.
- Some age-old practices that guide selection to posts in panchayats will now be eliminated.
- A regulated staffing in the Panchayats in the country can make them more inclusive.
- It can also ensure that the massive amount of funds that are devolved to them produce uniform and beneficial results.
- The report will also cover the administrative structure of various programmes that have a bearing on rural development, including-
