Coronal Holes

NASA released an image taken by its Solar Dynamics Observatory (SDO) where the Sun seems to be smiling.

- The Sun in the image seems to have two dark eyes, a bright round nose and a wide-open smile.
- These dark patches on the Sun are known as coronal holes.
- Coronal holes are cooler denser regions in the Sun's corona.
- They appear as irregular black patches when the sun is imaged in ultraviolet light or certain types of X-ray images.
- These regions also appear when fast solar wind gushes out into space.

- They are not periodical and can pop up on the solar surface at any time.

Solar Dynamics Observatory

- NASA launched Solar Dynamics Observatory (SDO) in 2010.
- SDO is the first satellite in the NASA's Living with a Star program, which studies space weather.
- SDO studies how solar activity happens and how that impacts the Earth's magnetosphere.
- SDO takes observations of the Sun's interior, surface and atmosphere.
- SDO carries three instruments:

| | |
|--|---|
| Helioseismic and Magnetic Imager (HMI) | HMI studies changes in the Sun's magnetic field by capturing images of the Sun in polarized light every 50 seconds. |
| Atmospheric Imaging Assembly (AIA) | AIA observes the solar corona in eight wavelengths of ultraviolet light every 10 seconds. |
| Extreme Ultraviolet Variability Experiment (EVE) | EVE determines every 10 seconds how much energy the Sun emits at extreme ultraviolet wavelengths. |
