Morgan Stanley Capital International (MSCI)

\n\n

\n

- MSCI is the world's biggest index compiler, with more than $10 trillion in assets benchmarked to its products.

\n

- Recently it said, China's local currency shares referred to as China 'A' shares would be added to the index.

\n

- MSCI is closely tracked by global investors and inclusion of china's shares will open up investment interest from foreign investors and adds financial credibility.

\n

- If china continues to gain more weightage on the index, more money could flow out of India.

NISAR

\n\n

\n

- NASA-ISRO Synthetic Aperture Radar satellite (NISAR) is the world's most expensive earth imaging satellite.

\n

- NISAR is dual frequency RADAR, it is an L-band and S-band RADAR. It is the first such satellite using dual frequency RADAR.

\n

- The S-band is being built by ISRO and L-band by NASA.

\n

- It is expected that the NISAR satellite will be launched in 2021 from India using the Geo-synchronous Satellite Launch Vehicle (GSLV).

\n

- One of the main purposes of the mission is to observe Earth and establish a general pathway for future joint missions for Mars exploration.

\n

\n\n

\n\n

\n

- It will take weekly snapshots of earth that will provide time lapse images of the motion of tectonic plates, ice sheets and changes in vegetation over land in agriculture and forests.

\n

- NISAR will provide a means of resolving highly spatial and temporally complex processes ranging from ecosystem disturbances, to ice sheet collapse and natural hazards including earthquakes, tsunamis, volcanoes, and landslides.
