Why is this appointment process welcome?

 $n$

\n

• The political orientation of the nominees is likely that of the nominating government.

۱n

- \bullet So the process of confirmation in the US Senate checks publicly, the suitability for appointment as a judge. \n
- The process of public scrutiny checks if the nominee is capable of an objective approach to legal and constitutional reasoning.
- So in the US, the collegial approach spans the whole nation and virtually the world.

\n

It gives a wider scope in participating in national decision-making.

What is the case with India?

 $n$

۱n

• No such process, as given above, occurs in India prior to the appointment of a judge.

\n

- In India, the collegial impulses are confined to five learned men.
- A "collegium" of the five senior-most judges of the Supreme Court decides on appointment of judges to the Supreme Court or any other court.
- \bullet They consider names primarily from among chief justices of the high courts and occasionally from the bar. $\mbox{\sc h}$

\n\n

Why is public scrutiny essential?

 $n\n$

۱n

- \bullet The judges play a significant role of making crucial decisions for the country. $\mbox{\ensuremath{^{\text{h}}}}$
- To mention some, they decide what people eat, what they can and cannot say, who they can have sex with and whether or not one can visit a temple. $$

• They decide matters of life and death, guilt and innocence, detention and freedom, bail or jail.

\n

- There is no aspect of people's life which is not governed by the law and certainly, judges are the ultimate interpreters of the law.
- But an opaque process in appointments impacts the legitimacy of the decisions of the court.

 $n\n$

What does it call for?

 $n\n$

\n

• A transparent process should replace the existing opaque process of appointment of judges.

۱n

 Pre-appointment background checks must be made known through a process of public hearings.

\n

- This must include allegations of sexual harassment, wherein the contribution of the MeToo movement would help ensure accountability in the judiciary.
- India, in all, needs a new process of appointment of judges and new criteria for evaluation to reflect public expectations.
