

The Juvenile Justice Bill, 2015

\n\n

What is the bill on?

\n\n

\n

- The Bill replaces the Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Act, 2000.

\n

- It addresses children in conflict with the law.

\n

- It also has provisions for children in need of care and protection.

\n

\n\n

What are the key provisions?

\n\n

\n

- Trial - The three types of offences defined by the Bill are:\n\n

\n

- i. heinous offence - that attracts a minimum penalty of 7 years imprisonment under any existing law

\n

- ii. serious offence - that gets imprisonment between 3 to 7 years

\n

- iii. petty offence - penalized with up to 3 years imprisonment

\n

\n

\n

- Juveniles between the ages of 16-18 years will be tried as adults for heinous offences.

\n

- Any 16-18 year old, who commits a lesser, i.e., serious offence, may be tried as an adult.

\n

- But this is only if he/she is detained after the age of 21 years.

\n

- Juvenile Justice Boards (JJB) and Child Welfare Committees (CWC) will be constituted in each district.

\n

- JJB - The JJB will assess the child's mental and physical capacity, ability to understand consequences of the offence, etc.

\n

- This is to determine whether a juvenile offender is to be sent for rehabilitation or be tried as an adult.

\n

- Based on this assessment, a Children's Court will decide further.

\n

- CWC - The Bill addresses children in need of care and protection.

\n

- If an orphaned, abandoned or surrendered child is found, he/she is brought before a Child Welfare Committee within 24 hours.

\n

- A social investigation report is conducted for the child.

\n

- The Committee will decide to either send the child to a children's home or any other facility it deems fit.

\n

- Adoption - CWC can also declare the child to be free for adoption or foster care.

\n

- The Bill outlines the eligibility criteria for prospective parents.

\n

- It also details procedures for adoption, and introduces a provision for inter-country adoption.

\n

- Besides, penalties for the following have been prescribed:

\n

\n\n

\n

- i. cruelty against a child

\n

- ii. offering a narcotic substance to a child

\n

- iii. abduction or selling a child

\n

\n\n

What are the concerns?

\n\n

\n

- Deterrence - There are differing views on whether juveniles should be tried as adults.

\n

- It may not act as a deterrent for juveniles committing heinous crimes.

\n

- On the other hand, a reformatory approach will reduce the likelihood of repeating offences.

\n

- Constitution - The provision of trying a juvenile as an adult based on date of apprehension could violate Article 14, Article 21.

\n

- It also counters the spirit of Article 20(1) by according a higher penalty for the same offence, if the person is apprehended after 21 years of age.

\n

- UN provisions - Under the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child every child under the age of 18 years should be treated as equal.

\n

- The provision of trying a juvenile as an adult thus contravenes the UN Convention.

\n

- Discrepancy - Some penalties provided in the Bill are not in proportion to the gravity of the offence.

\n

- E.g. the penalty for selling a child is lower than that for offering intoxicating or psychotropic substances to a child.

\n

- Standing Committee - The Standing Committee examining the Bill observed that it was based on misleading NCRB data.

\n

- This is because the data was based on FIRs and not actual convictions, regarding juvenile crimes.

\n

- It said that the approach towards juvenile offenders should be reformatory and rehabilitative.

\n

- It also observed that the Bill violates some constitutional provisions.

\n

- These have been addressed by deletion of the relevant clause, at the time of passing the Bill in Lok Sabha.

\n

\n\n

What are the shortfalls with the earlier Act?

\n\n

\n

- The existing Juvenile Justice Act, 2000 was facing implementation issues and procedural delays with regard to adoption, etc.

\n

- The National Crime Records Bureau (NCRB) data suggests an increase in crimes committed by juveniles.

\n

- This is particularly in reference with those in the 16-18 years age group.

\n

- The percentage of juvenile crimes (in proportion to total crimes) has increased from 1% in 2003 to 1.2% in 2013.

\n

- Notably, the 16-18 year olds accused of crimes as a percentage of all juveniles accused of crimes increased from 54% to 66%.

\n

- Under the 2000 Act, any child in conflict with law may spend a maximum of 3 years in institutional care (special home, etc.).

\n

- The child cannot be given any penalty higher than 3 years, nor be tried as an adult and be sent to an adult jail.

\n

- This is regardless of the type of offence committed.

\n

\n\n

\n\n

Quick Fact

\n\n

Juvenile

\n\n

\n

- In the Indian context, a juvenile or child is any person who is below the age of 18 years.

\n

- However, the Indian Penal Code specifies that a child cannot be charged for any crime until he/she has attained 7 years of age.
