

Transgender Option in Railway Reservation Forms

Why in news?

\n\n

\n

- The Railways and Indian Railways Catering and Tourism Corporation Limited (IRCTC) have included “transgender/third gender” as a gender option alongside males and females in the Railway Ticket Reservation Forms.

\n

- The inclusion is in compliance with a April 2014 judgment of the Supreme Court of India in the case of National Legal Services Authority (NALSA) vs. Union of India.

What was the case about?

\n\n

\n

- The Lawyers Collective, a NGO had filed an intervention, on behalf of Ms. Laxmi Narayan Tripathy, a Hijra/transgender activist.

\n

- She sought recognition of self-identified gender of persons, either as male/female/third gender, based on their choice.

\n

- The petitioner alleged violation of Article 14, 15, 19 and 21 of the Constitution of India by the IRCTC, by non-inclusion of “transgender/third gender” as a gender option in its reservation forms.

\n

- They also demanded special coaches and reserved seats for the transgender community in all trains, for their “care and protection”.

\n

- The NALSA in its petition had also sought several directions from the Supreme Court. It includes\n

\n

- Granting of equal rights and protection to transgender persons

\n

- Inclusion of a third category in recording one’s sex/gender in identity documents like the election card, passport, driving license and ration card &

\n

- For admission in educational institutions, hospitals, among others.

\n

\n

\n\n

What was the judgment?

\n\n

\n

- The apex court directed the Centre and the State governments to recognise transgender as the third sex.

\n

- It also directed to provide them with the benefits accorded to socially and economically backward classes.

\n

- The Bench observed that the non-existence of law recognising transgender as the third gender could not be continued to be relied on as a ground to discriminate them in availing equal opportunities in education and employment.

\n

- It said the Centre and the State governments should\n

\n

- develop social welfare schemes for the transgender community

\n

- run public awareness campaigns to erase the social stigma attached to them, apart from considering carving out job reservations for them.
