China's Crackdown on Cryptocurrencies

- Chinese regulators have tightened restrictions that ban financial institutions and payment companies from providing services related to cryptocurrencies. They tightened the previous ban issued in 2017.
- The new ban, which was posted by the People's Bank of China (PBOC), greatly expanded the scope of prohibited services, and said that "virtual currencies are not supported by any real value".
- It made clear that institutions must not accept virtual currencies, or use them as a means of payment and settlement.
- Institutions cannot provide exchange services between cryptocurrencies and the yuan or foreign currencies.
- Institutions were prohibited from providing cryptocurrency saving, trust or pledging services and issuing crypto-related financial products.
- Virtual currencies must not be used as investment targets by trust and fund products.

Earlier Rules in China against Cryptocurrencies

- China doesn't recognise cryptocurrencies as legal tender and the banking system doesn't accept cryptocurrencies or provide relevant services.
- In 2013, the government defined bitcoin as a virtual commodity and said individuals were allowed to freely participate in its online trade.
- However, later that year, financial regulators banned banks and payment companies from providing bitcoin-related services.
- In 2017, China banned Initial Coin Offerings (ICOs) in a bid to protect investors and curb financial risks. These rules banned crypto trading platforms from converting legal tender into cryptos and vice versa.
- The ICO rules also barred financial firms and payment companies from providing services for ICOs and cryptocurrencies, including account openings, registration, trading, clearing or liquidation services.

FakeBuster

- It is a 'Deepfake' detection tool developed by the Indian Institute of Technology, Ropar and Monash University (Australia).
- ['Deepfakes' are real time mimicked visuals (videos) in the video-calling platforms through spoofing tools based on transfer of facial expressions that are manipulated using artificial intelligence.

- They can even be used during online examinations and job interviews.]
- FakeBuster can identify imposters attending a virtual conference without anybody's knowledge. It enables the organizer to detect if another person's video is manipulated or spoofed during a video conferencing.
- It can also find out faces manipulated on social media to defame or make a joke of someone.
- The tool works in both online and offline modes. It is independent of video conferencing solutions like Zoom, Skype, etc.

National Financial Reporting Authority Database

- The National Financial Reporting Authority (NFRA) is a regulatory body set up under Section 132 of the Companies Act, 2013.
- NFRA oversees compliance by companies that can be described as Public Interest Entities (PIEs) with Accounting and Auditing Standards.
- PIEs include all listed companies, and large unlisted companies.
- To discharge this mandate, NFRA is in the process of creating a verified and accurate database of companies and auditors that come under the regulatory ambit of NFRA.
- In this regard the NFRA has been engaging with the Corporate Data Management (CDM) division of Ministry of Corporate Affairs (MCA) and three recognised stock exchanges in India.
- NFRA, formed in 2018, is responsible for transparency and reliability of financial statements and information presented by listed companies and large unlisted companies in India.

Tlatolophus galorum

- A 72 million year old specimen of a dinosaur species called Tlatolophus galorum has been identified in Mexican state of Coahuila.
- The name Tlatolophus is derived from tlahtolli, meaning 'word' in the indigenous Nahuatl language and lophus, meaning crest in Greek.
- This dinosaur species is believed to have been "very communicative" and used low-frequency sounds like elephants to talk to each other.
- These low-frequency sounds travel several kilometres and are imperceptible to humans.
- These "peaceful, but talkative" dinosaurs could also have had the ability to emit loud sounds to scare off predators.
- These dinosaurs, like modern birds, saw in colour and so these structures like the crest were possibly brightly colored.
