

U P S C

Q.1

A fine balance between elected representatives and bureaucrats/professionals is required for the Indian parliamentary system to handle various challenges. Explain (200 Words)

(Please don't write anything in this space)

Indian Constitution was the product of匯acking all the best Constitutions of the world proudly claimed our Ambedkar, "Modern architect". It balanced all the best practices of democracy.

(Please don't write anything in this space)

Gives our vast Cultural & geographical extent and our diversity. "One size fit for all" is not possible. A person from Plain can't understand the problems of hill area and vice versa. So we needed a representative form of government. In case of U.S.A. The representative himself distribute the seats among those who aid them to power. But this often leaves space for Corruption and lack of expertise.

Most elected representatives may not be the bright mind or expert in every field. They need assistance in every sector of decision making.

Bureaucrats comes into filling the vacuum.

"Civil servants are the steel frame of Nation claimed the Iron man of India. True, there should be

U P S C

Some form of link between different sector of society at least in political format for its own interest convenience.

(Please don't write anything in this space)

While the bureaucrat may not be able to convince the entire population, he can get the support of the elected representatives to fulfil his duties.

(Please don't write anything in this space)

To the elected representatives give importance to the like vote bank ~~but~~ and his political ideology but the representatives can make sure the benefit reaches all sectors of society.

While the elected representatives know the need of his constituency but a bureaucrat who may have been transferred to the new locality may not know the needs of the people.

Elected representatives may impress the voters with populous promises but the bureaucrat may fulfil the promise is a acceptable way ~~and~~ weeds out unconstitutional ones.

People may not be able to question the bureaucrat but they can exercise their power through the elected representatives.

Throughout the world everybody there is ~~the~~ a ^{form} of war of Power. For any fruitful government there is need of balance of