

Recent incidents like custodial death of father-son duo in Tuticorin or with stan swami/Navalatha's medical negligence by poison demand urgent Prison Reforms.

Supreme court in Ramamurthy v/s state of KN highlighted various problems in Indian prisons like

(i) OVERCROWDING - with more than 114%. occupancy (NCRB-2015), Indian prisons are among most crowded compared to USA & UK.

a) of these 75% are undertials & 70% of them belong to marginalised section. while there are only 11%, 20% undertials in UK, USA respectively.

(ii) torture & ill treatment - which reflects into rising number of custodial deaths specially SC/ST & minorities

(iii) STAFF CRUNCH - nearly 33% posts are vacant and prison staff - population ratio lagger around 1:7. In case of women there are only 9.6% women across all level of prison against sanctioned strength of 33%.

→ similarly lack of SC/ST and other marginal section in police staff creates negligence & communication gap.

(iv) Infrastructural faults - Being colonial construction most prison does not comply with UN-standard minimum rules like minimum floor space, lightening, heating, medical aid and food.

→ lack of communication facility keeps them isolated from world & families.

Hence, SC & various committees from time to time advocated for certain reforms like

(i) Justice A.N Mulla recommended for All India prison service as a profession.

(ii) model Prison manual 2016 should be administered by states as state prison is state subject to ensure

- Access to legal service
- computerisation & modernisation.
- Adequate & proportionate staff
- inspection.
- Right of prisoners sentenced for death

(iii) law commission recommended timeline to release undertrials of crime less than 7 years if they completed half of their sentence because of rising undertrials.

(iv) para legal volunteer scheme (PLV) recommended by NALSA to provide trained mediators between marginalised section & authorities to fill communication gap like NGOS.

(v) women specific measures like grievance redressal, separate care for mothers and watch recommended by MOW&C to reduce custodial death [odisha case].

Thus prison reforms are urgent required it will also include judicial some legal reforms.
